Pathways into Postsecondary for Students Impacted by the Pandemic

Apply for this Funding Opportunity to support access to postsecondary education and support academic recovery from the pandemic.

Overview

ONCAT is interested in working with postsecondary institutions to support pathways into postsecondary education for students that may require additional transition supports due to educational disruptions experienced during the pandemic. This includes pathways into PSE for students that experience historical and ongoing barriers to postsecondary education. These access and pandemic recovery pathways will help students catch up on learning and transition successfully into postsecondary education.

Through this funding, ONCAT is interested in projects that incorporate:

- Pathways into postsecondary for students that have been impacted by the pandemic, especially communities of students that experience ongoing barriers to postsecondary access that has been exacerbated by the pandemic;
- Strategies to support academic recovery of students impacted by the pandemic that result in the student earning postsecondary credits;
- Transition year programs, bridges, and transfer pathways with other institutions, in order to support students impacted by the pandemic, to begin their studies and transition into their programs of choice;
- Preference will be given to proposals that allow students to transfer to multiple programs at more than one postsecondary institution.

Eligibility

Publicly assisted postsecondary institutions in Ontario (colleges, universities, and Indigenous Institutes), are eligible to apply. Applications can be from individual institutions or collaborative initiatives.

Funding Available

Apply to ONCAT's Seamless Transfer stream by January 23, 2023 for the first cohort of funding.

Grants generally range from $10,000- $100,000. Larger grants may be considered based on the project scope.
